CROP AND MARKET NEWS RADIO BROADCASTING SCHEDULES, 1929

Market News by Radio

With the eighth of the yearly lists of schedules for the stations broadcasting crop and market news reports radio listeners find that much stabilization has taken place and radio in American homes in both city and country has assumed a place only comparable in permanence with the telephone.

Of the three stations which began the broadcasting of market reports in 1921 two are still broadcasting the reports regularly and the third relinquished the service in favor of a station having greater power, but located in the same city.

The popularity of market reports as a part of the program of radio stations has increased during the past eight years. Three stations in 1921, sixty-five in 1922, eighty-five in 1923 and ninety-two in 1924. From 1924 to 1928 the growth was much slower. Last year's list contained 106 station schedules and the following 110.

During the past year due to the regulations of the Federal Radio Commission a number of changes in wave length, power and time allocations were made affecting the stations broadcasting crop and market reports. A few stations discontinued broadcasting entirely, and a few others discontinued crop and market reports because of the improvement of service over nearby stations or because of financial or other reasons. On the other hand seven stations added schedules of market information to their programs.

A few of the reasons behind this extensive service of broadcasting crop and market reports are:

1. Radio gets the reports to those who want it while the information still has market value.
2. Radio puts the information into the hands of the farmers in his home no matter how isolated he may be.
3. Radio has placed producers on an even trading basis with buyers.

Under the supervision of a disinterested, unbiased agency of the Federal Government, the reports have gained general respect as to dependability and accuracy.

One of the outstanding results of the wide spread interest in market news developed largely by radio has been the increased interest of the analytical reviews and summaries which are now regular weekly features of the different commodity market news services.

Now, as formerly, the leased wire telegraph system is the backbone of the market news service. About 8,000 miles of wire lines and 41 branch offices are daily in action, collecting, transferring and distributing the market reports. An average of more than 60,000 words are handled daily over the seven circuits. Additions to the circuit during the coming fiscal year will add nine branch offices and about 2,500 miles of leased wire. Nashville, New Orleans, and Jackson, Mississippi in the South. Cleveland and Detroit in the North, and Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Boise, Idaho in the West, will be connected by additions to the leased wire system.

That the producers, shippers, dealers and the transportation agencies may be better informed regarding supply demand and prices, the Federal market news service and the cooperating radio stations are rendering a service impossible of duplication by private agencies and not equaled by any governmental agency in any other country.

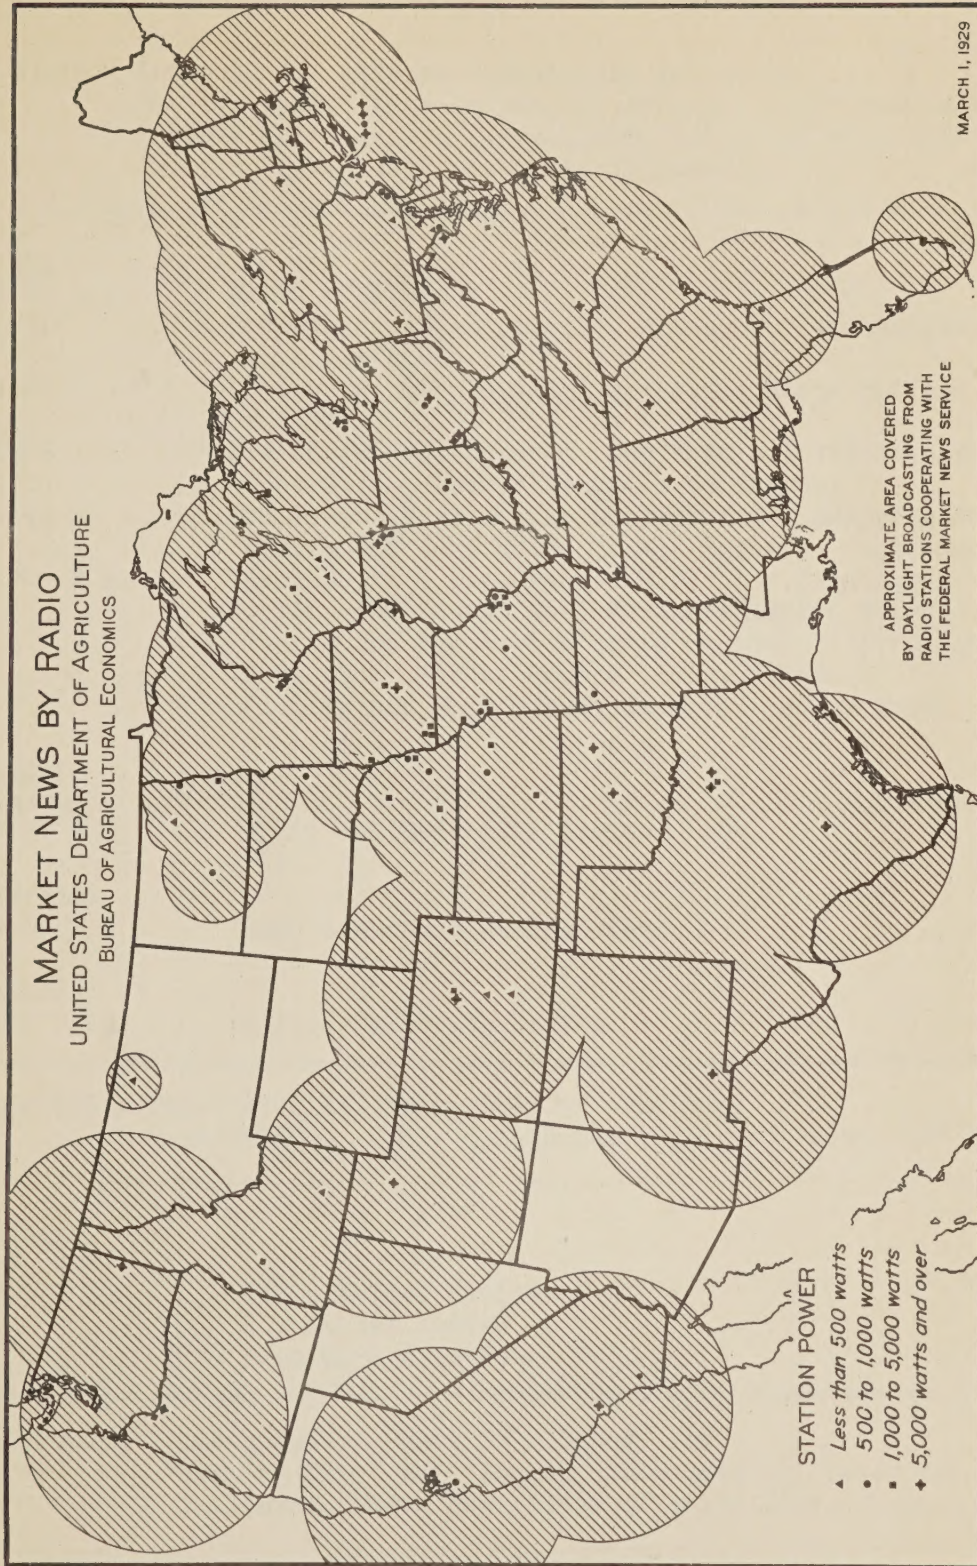

The map on the opposite page shows the approximate area covered by this service. True circles are not the exact limits of a broadcasting station area of reception. The areas indicated are conservative and give a fair picture of the coverage. Stations of less than 500 watts cannot be expected to be received well over greater than a 50 mile radius in the day time. 100 miles is a reasonable limit for 500 and 750 watt stations. 150 miles for stations of 1000 to 5000 watts power and 250 miles for all stations having greater than 5000 watts power.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics keeps in touch with all stations engaged in broadcasting crop and market reports. Any station desiring to add crop or market reports to its program will be assisted in every way possible. No exclusive rights to broadcast are given to any station for all reports are public information as soon as issued.
